A Conflict: of words or weapons?

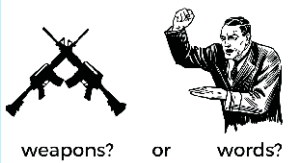

The Crisis Committee amends the UN charter during the heat of a probable nuclear war:

Report by Pruthi Pimpalgaonkar

A war fought through weapons soon turned into one that was now fought through words as the third committee session of the Crisis Committee progressed. With the USA deploying missiles in Turkey and Italy and the Soviet Union doing the same in Cuba, a nuclear war was not far away.

The delegates had a heated discussion regarding this issue, with several stating that this was by no means an act of war. Moreover, as Article 39 of the UN Charter did not specify what was and was not defined as war, the committee took it upon themselves to amend the UN Charter and add a substantial definition of the same.

Which one really is a war?

Tensions were eased as the following clauses were added after the General Assembly voted in majority for the amendment:

1) Deployment of any nuclear missiles or weapons in any country. 2) Deployment of troops in any foreign countries except for aid in conditions where peace is threatened.

Only further developments can suggest whether this conflict would turn into something bigger and dangerous.

DISEC

The committee of DISEC resumed today by the delegates entering the conference with great enthusiasm and zeal. The committee commenced with an ice-breaking session where delegates were asked to share their portfolio, something they took pride in and one thing they wanted to change about the world.

Singapore admitted that during Covid-19 all he did was, "Khaye, Piye Aur So Gaye!" It was also discovered that the chair did not notice the Delegates of Iran and South Korea during the first day of the conference.

North Korea admitted that one thing he wanted to change was Kim Jong-Un's hairstyle.

Argentina said that the Delegate of USA deserved the 'Best Delegate' title and also that he desired it more. Also the Chair admitted that Thailand had a cool sense of humour by addressing "It's as messed up as mine."

Further the moderated caucus and un-moderated caucus was discussed along with the two rounds of voting.

The Delegate of Indonesia ripped apart a paper that said Security and Privacy stating that the two words did not exist as rights!!!

"We started with sticks and stones, then came blades and cannons and then we jumped to guns..." began South Korea during the moderated caucus on the impact of intelligent automation. The delegate of Norway as he cited the advancements taking place due to the emergence of AI, namely the development of autonomous and semi-autonomous UAVs, as well as the use of AI and machine learning algorithms in the military and civic spaces.

Who will be accountable for the lack of human oversight during decision making? The committee is on the verge of finding out, as they discuss categorical solutions after having deliberated on the pros, cons and role of UAVs.
